THE EVENT

IU Health/Indiana University Hospital, one of the leading home dialysis programs in the United States, invites you to participate in it's 8th dialysis symposium and workshop. Come share experiences and learn from peers as well as established experts in growing, thriving, comprehensive home dialysis programs that optimize the benefits for patients, partners, physicians, the care team, and the facilities alike.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

The focus of this program is on the physician and lead home training nurse from facilities that are seeking to start up a home program as well a those that have an active home program including both home hemodialysis and peritoneal dialysis and a strong commitment to significantly growing the size of that program. Due to the symposium's focus on cross-functional collaboration, best value will be obtained if both the key physician and home training nurse for the program are in attendance.

VALUE TO ATTENDEES

Attendees will take away from the program increased knowledge and expertise in the areas described below, in addition to a deeper understanding of the best practices as well as pitfalls to avoid in order to take a home dialysis program to the next level of success. In addition, the symposium's combination of didactic, small-scale workshop, and networking opportunities will allow attendees to get both practical information as well as peer contacts to help increase success in their own programs.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Upon completion of this program, participant should be able to:

- Recognize the evidence supporting the benefits of a home dialysis program on the mortality and morbidity of increased frequency dialysis therapy in the U.S.
- Identify the financial and programmatic needs of starting and maintaining a program.
- Increase recruitment, education and retention of patients and staff.
- Discuss techniques for empowering the patient in decision making and how empowerment improves recruitment and retention.
- Identify the social impacts, benefits of peer mentoring and end of life peritoneal dialysis programs.
- Identify the benefits of a comprehensive home dialysis program and present how to integrate home dialysis and peritoneal dialysis programs.
